Introducing the Internet EssentialsSM Ambassadors Program

A passion for technology, a dedication to community

Community-focused partners like you play a vital role in helping us get the word out about the value and availability of affordable home Internet. That’s why we’re so excited about the Internet Essentials Ambassadors Program. This allows our dedicated employees to leverage their community connections, volunteering time to make sure even more children can take advantage of the learning opportunities that come with home Internet access. In fact, 1,300 Ambassadors have volunteered more than 2,100 hours already.

Ambassador Spotlight: Andrea Agnew

Comcast employees giving back

Meet Comcast’s Executive Director of Workforce Diversity and Inclusion, Andrea Agnew. As an Internet Essentials Ambassador and a major champion for the program, raised in a low-income family of five children, Andrea sees herself in the eyes of many young people who face challenges accessing the opportunities they need to succeed in life.

As a single mother of two, Andrea was determined that her daughters would not be raised in poverty. She grew up with the responsibility of caring for four siblings while her mom worked night shifts to provide for her large family. Even though funds were limited, Andrea was able to grow up with music, theater and classic movies, all because her mother leveraged what resources were around her. Andrea used this dedication, resourcefulness and work ethic to mold her career and build a foundation to nurture two daughters of her own. For Andrea, Internet Essentials is an outlet of access to opportunities and knowledge for families. She is confident the next generation will get closer to overcoming poverty with the resources the Internet is able to provide and bring families up to speed.

“I’m not just telling the story – I am the story of how so many families struggle when resources are limited. Internet Essentials brings the world right to your home and provides support and learning to get children and families up to speed.”
– Andrea Agnew

Applying for Internet Essentials is even more flexible

School’s almost out, but the learning must carry on

Internet Essentials is a great way for students to get connected – and help combat the learning loss that summer break can bring with it. With Internet Essentials, students have access to learning materials year-round so they never have to fall behind. Visit the partner portal for tools to help spread the word in your community.
